Where doing so, the applicant should bear in mind the above mentioned issues and seek to address same to the satisfaction of the deciding officer concerned at that time. It is further suggested that where submitting a fresh visa application for consideration that, proof of the applicant's return to the country of origin to demonstrate compliance with previous visa granted, be provided e.g. immigration re-entry stamp to home country. It should be borne in mind however that it does not automatically follow, that a previous visa grant will result in a future visa grant. Each case is considered on the basis of the particular circumstances of the case at hand at the time of consideration. The onus rests with the applicant at the time in question to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the deciding officer that the visa sought should be granted.

All documentation and submissions made at first instance and on appeal have been considered. I am not satisfied to grant the visa sought for the above mentioned reasons. Reasonable concerns arise surrounding finances bearing in mind, potential costs of the visit and the reference\sponsor's ability to finance same. I am further not satisfied that the applicant has demonstrated sufficient social, economic, professional or family ties in the country of origin that would, on the balance of probability, necessitate his\her return following the proposed visit. Having considered the full circumstances of this visa application in the round, reasonable concerns arise that the applicant may overstay, may work illegally and ultimately may not observe the conditions of a 'visit' visa in circumstances where one was to be granted. The onus rest with that applicant to demonstrate that the visa sought should be granted. The applicant has failed to do so in this instance. Accordingly, the decision to refuse the granting of the visa sought at first instance has been upheld following appeal.
